Privacy Statement

Homelessness Australia (HA) recognises the importance of confidential treatment of personal information and is committed to protecting the privacy of people who visit our website and to satisfying all obligations regarding the protection of privacy and confidential information.

Homelessness Australia makes a record of your visit to our website. The following information is collected to monitor the performance of the website: the user's server address; the user's top-level domain name (e.g. .com, .gov, .au, .uk); the date and time of the visit to the site; the pages accessed and documents downloaded and the type of browser used. This data does not include personal information and is not used to identify individual users.

When you visit the Homelessness Australia website, we may collect details such as your name, organisation, contact details and billing information in order to provide you with a service that you have requested, such as membership or subscriptions to magazines or e-newsletters. Homelessness Australia only collects personally identifying information if you voluntarily provide this information to us. This information will only be used to provide the service that you have requested. . HA will store the information collected and prevent any unauthorised access and improper use of this information through appropriate technologies and security methods.

The information collected from the website will not be disclosed to a third party except when legally required.

Homelessness Australia is not responsible for the content of external internet sites. Links to other relevant websites have been provided in good faith. Other internet sites or services that may be accessible through HA's website have separate data and privacy practices independent of us, and therefore we disclaim any responsibility or liability for their policies or actions. Please contact those vendors and others directly if you have any questions about their privacy policies.
